Writing

The last book I have read is "World and Peace" written by Lev Tolstoy. This is the giant novel about the Russian Empire in war with Napoleon Bonapart's France in 1805-1812. The book contains four volumes (or chapters). There are more than seven hundreds characters in it!

Author describes the life of soldiers, their feelings and fears about their life. The problem of this piece of literature is "What is the glory?"

One of the main characters is Andrey Bolkonskiy. He was fighting his "talon" - the glory, the goal of life.

What is war? Love? Death? Family? You can know learn about it from this book. Characters have different values and principles.

It make reader feels like he is among this people. In this book we can learn more about life of our nations and history. There are a lot of fights described through prism of time.

I love this novel. I think everytime person reads it, he or she finds something new.

The strong side of this book is language and historical indentity of story. There are russians, franceses, germans. All of them reflect their countries' mentalities of that time.

Also "World and Peace" is psychological novel. We know about characters from their thoughts and feelings. We know their motivations. It makes us feel empathy to them.

The weakness of the book is its volume. It's very big. In Russia "World in Peace" is read in 10's class program.

I think not every student can understand this book in the age of 16.

But I like this novel. I have really enjoyed it while reading.
